ASWA MISSION STATEMENT

“The mission of the American Society of Women Accountants shall be to enable women in all accounting and related fields to achieve their full personal, professional and economic potential and to contribute to the future development of their profession”

Pamela's Topic

There has been a lot of talk around women in business. Can we account for the change? Are we asking how to fit women into the world as it is? Or are we seeking to change the world so that it fits women (as well as men)? Let's explore who the women in our group are. We will look at a summary behavioral profile of our group, and we will compare it to our 'ideal' culture. Change is all about "the graceful art of noticing". Maybe we will walk away from our lunch today with the ability to notice our unique impact in the business world. It is time to 'account' for women in business and to be a 'projection' of the world, so that our next generation will feel the 'balance'.

Speaker Profile – Pamela Teagarden

Informative, relevant, cathartic and entertaining describe Pamela Teagarden's style of coaching and presenting entrepreneurial solutions to corporate problems. Her background as a CPA, in concert with her experience and studies in behavioral psychology, change management and training give her clients the whole picture. Pamela can speak to the 'bottom line' of anything she does, and gives her clients an understanding of how their personal changes will aid in profit-making activities.

In her experience, Pamela has

- worked as consultant on successful mergers, including the largest merger in history, she
- managed changes, such as women's initiatives and culture shifts
- created corporate universities and leadership curriculums
- coached top and middle level executives in companies of all sizes
- coached entrepreneurs toward creating their vision into a business opportunity

Her clients praise her enthusiasm, her love of people, her willingness and ability to listen as well as her readiness to innovate.

Pamela's own career has been global. She has lived in Moscow, London and Dallas, and her work has allowed her to travel to nearly every country around the globe. That ex-patriate view of the world and her experience with global clients has given her a real sense of what diversity and culture clashes require. She has aligned with companies and people to insure that every project or tool she uses can be customized to the 'global-ness' of the client. Not at all surprisingly, there are very few companies, now, that do not have some global reach, in their business, their products or their customers.

As a speaker, Pamela has covered topics, such as:

“Entrepreneurialism in the corporate environment”

“Women in leadership: Are we there yet?”

“What management ‘baggage’ can we leave in the last century?”

“The Future of Management”

“Personalized Learning? What does it mean to my company?”

“The Future of the Organization”

She is an author and contributor to books and articles.

Pamela's clients include: Microsoft, IBM, PricewaterhouseCoopers, ABN-Amro, Yum! Restaurants International, Weaver and Tidwell, and many others.
